Jim: Hi Lily! Guess who forgot their phone at home today?

Lily: I know I did, Jim, and I've been going crazy without it! Has anyone called?

Jim: Well, sis, your classmate – or should I say secret boyfriend Paul did. He sounded mad! He can't make it to the school disco on Saturday, because he's down with the flu and not going out anywhere soon, so you should find another dancing partner. I would suggest Mark – he's much better-looking.

Lily: Mark? That will be the day – he's got two left feet. No, I'd rather call Tony. In fact, I'll do it right away.

Attention please! This is Manager Tim Robbins wishing you a warm welcome to the Deluxe Shopping Centre! A young boy, seemingly just over nine, with brown hair and eyes, wearing a Batman T-shirt and torn jeans, and carrying a purple teddy bear, seems to have lost his parents. Would one or both of them please come to the Management and HR Sector, Floor 4, Room 004, as soon as they can? That's Room 004, Floor 4. Thank you!

Nina: Hi, Bob. How are you doing?

Bob: Not too good, Nina! I just flunked the chemistry test. Mrs Hawk really hates me!

Nina: Well, you don't really make any effort, do you?

Bob: True, but that's not the reason!

Nina: Oh! What is?

Bob: You see, she and my mother went to college together, and they both fell for the same guy, Robert, because he was such a good guitar-player and everything. But it was my mother who married him, though he was thinking of proposing to Mrs Hawk.

Nina: Wait – do you mean Robert is your father?

Bob: Yes. And I'm named after him – Robert and Bob, you see. And our first dog was called Robin, but he died from choking on a bone last year. I think our neighbour, Mrs Lewis, gave it to him deliberately, because she claimed she couldn't sleep all night because of his bark. She should be in jail!

Nina: My God, Bob! But who told you all that about your mother and father and Mrs Hawk?

Bob: Mrs Lewis. She's poisonous, and loves to gossip.

Nina: I see. Well, life is tough, and you've had it tougher than most. But I can help you with the chemistry, if you want. You know I'm really good at it!

Bob: Really? You'd do that for me? Wow, thanks!

Nina: Yes, you can come over to my place and I'll go over all the important stuff with you.

Bob: Great! How about tonight?

Nina: Er... tonight I'm having Monica, and Lily, and Gina over. Oh, and Tanya, of course!

Bob: Ok, what's the problem? I like them all!

Nina: Well, it's a girl thing, you see, and we take turns hosting, and tonight it's mine. And we sit around in pyjamas, do our nails, watch romantic comedies, so guys aren't really welcome.

Bob: Well, what about Tuesday then?

Nina: Can't, I have my yoga class then. Wednesday... – no, that's for ballroom dancing. Thursday?

Bob: On Thursday I've got basketball practice.

Nina: OK, let's talk again on Friday and we'll think of something.

Task Four

You will hear a text twice. Before you listen to it for the first time, you have 1 minute to read the tasks to the text. While listening to the text for a second time, you can mark your chosen answers. After you listen to the text for the second time, you have 1 more minute to check or correct your answers.

Hello to all you early risers out there, and welcome to the hourly news edition on InfoTV3 at 7.00 AM! On the hour, sharp, here is the main news for today:

US president Bo Babbit has agreed to meet with Russian President Sergei Breznov in Moscow and discuss major global issues such as the ongoing recession, climate change, international policy and the future of Russian-American economic relations. Teenage eco-activist Gerda Binburg has announced that she will mobilise Green forces from around the world and storm Moscow in protest against the increasing level of carbon monoxide emissions, which none of the world powers, she claims, has paid serious attention to.

Meanwhile, UK Prime Minister George Turner is continuing to suffer from media accusations that in the last five years his wife, former fashion model Jayne Thompson, has spent nearly half a million pounds of taxpayers' money on hairdressers and cosmeticians for her five Dachshund dogs, and nearly three times as much on beauticians for her own good looks. The PM and his wife have denied each and every one of these allegations, calling them blatant lies.

In neighbouring France, reports of a mass tick infestation are scaring tourists away. The tourist industry has applied for additional state subsidies as it has suffered a loss of about 57% in the last six months, when the first report of the attack of the nasty bugs was made by a tourist sunbathing by the Seine. One business, however, is booming: the sale of insect sprays, lotions and various pesticides has soared.

Finally, from the world of the stars: pop diva Marla Kerrigan, 58, has announced both her retirement from the music scene and her intention to divorce her husband of twenty-three years, hip-hopper Mikie D. The reason? According to Marla, she is tired of the hypocrisy and vanity of show business and is now focusing all her attention on fulfilling her lifelong spiritual ambitions. Details of her move are yet to be disclosed, but she has already told her millions of fans that soon she will be leaving secular life for good and will be joining a Buddhist monastery in the Himalayas, which is known as a centre of Tibetan Buddhism and the living place of Dalai Lama. The only comment her husband Mikie has made so far is “I’m sure we will remain the best of friends, because Marla is a beautiful person.” Marla and Mikie’s seven children, five of whom were adopted, have so far been unavailable for comment.

We’ll be back after the commercial break. Stay tuned and thank you for being with us.

Presenter: Hello, and welcome to BookWormWorld! This week with us is novelist Rosemary Marigold, author of Number One international bestseller Dying for Daisy. Now, Rosemary, I admit I haven’t read that one of your novels yet, but...

Rosemary: Oh, you mean you’ve read all the others?

Presenter: No, but my mother-in-law’s a huge fan! Still, I’m curious about the title. Sounds like a murder mystery – or have you switched back to vampire romance?

Rosemary: If you mean Desire in the Dark, yes, that’s how I began, but since then I have adopted a more realistic mode and I am not thinking of going back.

Presenter: Realistic? All your stories are about poor young girls hooking up with mega-rich businessmen, or poor young boys marrying into the aristocracy. How often does that happen in real life?

Rosemary: But that’s just it! That’s the key! If you know how to love, then you will achieve it all – meet the right person, enjoy a successful career, live your dreams! And have a happy marriage, of course...

Presenter: Is there such a thing?

Rosemary: Of course! I should know – I’ve been married four times, and I love all my ex-husbands dearly, even if I divorced them! Not darling Tony, of course, who had that ridiculous accident with the horse on that French farm, or Pete, who was way too old and died before we had enough of each other.

Presenter: Is there a fifth one on the way?

Rosemary: Ha-ha, wouldn’t you just like to know?

Presenter: Right. Now, back to the new book – who’s dying for Daisy, and why does she need someone to die for her?

Rosemary: Now that’s something for your mother-in-law to find out! Ha-ha! Why don’t you read the book and see for yourself?

Presenter: OK. And are you already writing the next one, and what will it be called?

Rosemary: I am, yes. The title? Could be Romancing the Rose. Or Love among the Lilies.

Presenter: But wasn’t that the one that came out last year? Or was that Life in Lotus-Land?

Rosemary: No, it was Lust amidst the Lilacs. You really should do your research more carefully, you know. But I think I may settle for Violins for Violet. Good one, huh?

Presenter: Thank you, Rosemary, it’s been a real pleasure.
