Consultant: Good morning! Can I help you?

Client /female/: Good morning! What should I buy for my next car? Should I go for a fully-electric one or get a hybrid or a plug-in hybrid?

Consultant: Well, to begin with, do you have your own driveway, or any other off-street parking?

Client: Yes, I do.

Consultant: Fine, because a home charger is generally regarded as a basic prerequisite for owning an electric vehicle. Do you drive less than 30,000 km per year?

Client: No, actually quite more.

Consultant: In this case you’re going to struggle with an electric vehicle, as the national charging network is still poor. A plug-in or regular hybrid might suit you better.

Client: I see.

Consultant: Do you do regular long-haul journeys?

Client: No, I just need it for the city and the close areas. I rarely go any further.

Consultant: Good, long journeys and electric vehicles are still problematic. Are you good with smart phones?

Client: Yes, I am good at technology.

Consultant: Good! Because you’ll need to know your way around an app or two to access charging points and stay in control of things like overnight charging and pre-heating or pre-cooling your car while it’s on charge. Is your car buying budget higher than 30,000 euro?

Client: No, I can’t spend more than that.

Consultant: Hmm, that will be tricky. There are very few good electric vehicles for less than 30,000 euros, so you’re going to struggle. You could buy a second-hand one, but you’ll need to be careful to get a car with a well-cared-for battery.

Client: You are right. I'll have to carefully weigh the pros and cons before choosing my next car. Thank you.

Consultant: You are welcome. I am here in any case.

Warner Bros. Discovery and its rival Paramount Global are in merger talks. They met on Tuesday to discuss the contours of a possible deal to join. The discussions are preliminary and may not lead to an agreement, said one of our sources, who asked not to be identified because the talks are private and still at an early stage. It seems the negotiators only had a friendly exchange of views on potential benefits of such a deal. Warner Bros. Discovery and Paramount have declined to comment.

Paramount Global is a global media, streaming and entertainment company that creates content for audiences worldwide. Warner Bros. Discovery, Inc. is an American multinational mass media and entertainment conglomerate with headquarters in New York City. It was formed from Warner Media's spin-off and merger with Discovery, Inc. on April 8, 2022.

A combination of the companies would unite famous Hollywood properties, including the Paramount and Warner Bros. film and TV studios, and put a number of pay-TV and broadcast stations, such as HBO and CBS, under a single roof.

Presenter: Baylee Littrell was just a 7-year-old child on the tour bus when he had his first song writing idea and excitedly called over his dad, Backstreet Boy Brian Littrell, to share it with him. A decade later, it was déjà vu as the 17-year-old raced to the back of the bus to wake up Brian at 4 a.m. for help with what would become his first self-penned release. They started structuring the song and throwing lyrics back and forth. Heartbroken over a breakup, the young musician put his pain into words in a powerful ballad, "Let Her Go", which became very popular and closes out his debut album, 770-Country. Baylee also stayed connected with fans through the pandemic with his new "Homemade Originals" series.

Today, we are talking to Baylee and Brian, who is 45, about music, heartache and working together.

Hello, Brian! Hi, Baylee! Baylee, when did you first realize your dad was a celebrity?

Baylee: I was around 9, when in a music shop I saw a gigantic bin of CDs with Millennium and other Backstreet Boys CDs. I was like, “Dad, what’s this?” and he said, “That’s me.” I thought he was lying, but he said, “I told you we were a pretty big deal.”

Presenter: Brian, you’ve become a key support in Baylee’s career, so could you tell us ...
